Washington, D.C. – High school and college students still hoping to land an internship this summer or fall should visit WeHireAmerica.jobs, where they will find over 4,500 internship positions available at many of America's largest employers. WeHireAmerica.jobs, hosted by the HR Policy Foundation and DirectEmployers Association, is a real-time job board of large employers, listing approximately 325,000 jobs currently available in the U.S. The website recently added internships to its listing to better serving students looking to gain work experience. The wide array of internships listed are from companies as diverse as Accenture, Home Depot, General Electric, Kaiser Permanente and IBM, and in locations from Boston to San Francisco.

Jaime S. Fall, Vice President of Workforce and Talent Sustainability of HR Policy Foundation said, "We are excited about the opportunities we can provide young people, such as real-time and accurate job and internship listings on WeHireAmerica.jobs. Internships are becoming an increasingly important way for those just starting their careers to gain valuable work experience and to prove themselves to potential employers. We're pleased to join with large employers and our partners at DirectEmployers Association to offer this resource."

In addition to WeHireAmerica.jobs, HR Policy Foundation offers a free career advice website jobipedia.org that was developed so entry-level job seekers could ask questions and hiring managers at some of America's largest employers would answer. Jobipedia.org Executive Director Michael Z. McGuinness said, "The addition of internships is a great complement to the existing list of available job opportunities. If a college student is worried it's too late to find an internship for this summer, the thousands of internship opportunities on WeHireAmerica.jobs can relieve some of that anxiety."

The Foundation website, HRPolicyFoundation.org also provides access to research such as the recently released Talent Sustainability Report in which HR executives at America's major employers give a candid assessment of their work on the front lines of the war for talent and how the rapid pace of innovation is changing their recruiting strategies, efforts to recruit Millennials and keep Baby Boomers productive in the workplace. The website also provides commentary on career and workplace issues from the viewpoint of HR Policy Foundation.
